ABSTRACT

This document presents results of a study to identify employers on the Navajo reservation conducted for the purpose of helping vocational rehabilitation counselors place American Indians with disabilities living on the reservation into appropriate jobs. The study identified 962 businesses on the reservation, not including churches. Businesses are categorized according to the Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) system. Graphs show business groupings by industry and number of employers, and by specific Navajo agencies and number of employers. The study found that at least 47 employers had more than 150 employees. It notes a reduction of eight percent in number of employers since a 1989 study. Statistical analysis of the data provides information on employer stability rate, turnover, and organizational life expectancy. Most of the document consists of appendices which include the actual employer listing (arranged by the five Navajo agencies), a list of Navajo-controlled employers located off the reservation, employers included in the 1989 listing but not the present one, important phone numbers for each of the five agencies, comparisons of the 1989 and 1993 lists by agency, large employers by agency, and a guide to the SIC classification system. Acknowledgments

This report is an update of Schwartz (1989), who established a useful format, which we have followed in most respects. We are grateful for her efforts in setting a standard for us to live up to.

The preparation of this report would not have been possible without the assistance of many people involved in the Bureau of Indian Affairs offices in Albuquerque and Gallup, New Mexico, as well as offices within the Navajo tribe in Window Rock, Arizona. Members of different agencies helped in the accumulation of different business listings. These people include personnel at the Division of Economic Development, Business Regulatory Department, Navajo Nation Business Preference Program, Window Rock, Arizona, which provided a source list of certified Navajo businesses within the Navajo Reservation; Ms. Rena Roan, administrative assistant, Chapter Government Development Department, who provided a list of important phone numbers within the Navajo Reservation; and Ms. Sheri Nolen, administrative assistant, American Indian Rehabilitation Research and Training Center, Institute for Human Development, Northern Arizona University, Flagstaff, Arizona, for her help in preparing the employer list.

Finally, this business listing would not have been possible without the help of Mr. Duane Etsitty, statistical analyst, Division of Economic Development for the Navajo Nation, Window Rock, Arizona. Mr. Etsitty's extensive listing of Navajo employers was instrumental in the completion of this aspect of this research project. His cooperativeness and professional insight with this project has been very much appreciated.

To all of those who helped with this project, THANK YOU!

Introduction

The purpose of this listing of employers on the Navajo Reservation is to attempt to identify all existing employers within the Navajo Reservation. This employer listing will serve as a guide for vocational rehabilitation counselors to show the extensive possibilities for job placements within the Navajo Reservation.

This report on Navajo Nation employers is one of a series of reports involved in the development of a local labor market analysis model to identify employment opportunities for persons with disabilities living on reservations (AIRRTC Project R-15). Commenting on the need for such models, Martin (1987, pp. 62-63) made the following observations:

> An approach often used as an attempt to overcome the limited labor market conditions on reservations is to relocate clients to cities with better labor market conditions for vocational training and/or employment. Relocation efforts, however, can be fraught with complications, such as client feelings of isolation from home, family and cultural traditions. In a study of vocational rehabilitation counselors who serve American Indian clients from 25 states, the majority of counselors serving Indians on reservations agreed with a statement that relocation strategies for training and employment purposes were important strategies to use with American Indian clients, but the majority of the same counselors disagreed with a statement that their clients were willing to relocate for vocational training and employment (Martin, Frank & Minkler, 1987). When this kind of discrepancy occurs between a client and the counselor on an individual basis, there may be some question as to the extent to which a client is vested in relocation for training or employment purposes. A client not fully willing to be relocated would certainly be more committed and perhaps more motivated to work if vocational placement were targeted for his or her home community. For clients not fully willing to relocate, a thorough analysis of local job opportunities is an important starting point for job placement activities. The importance of local labor market information related to reservation communities has been identified by rehabilitation counselors. Rehabilitation counselors servicing American Indian clients living on reservations reported that obtaining labor market information and developing job opportunities where their clients lived were important strategies toward successful rehabilitation, at a response rate of 92% and 93%, respectively (Martin, Frank, & Minkler, 1987).

An important step in this process was to establish a current listing of all employers within the Navajo Reservation. This step was accomplished by Judith L. Schwartz (1989). Within a few years, it became evident that an update of the 1989 version of the Employment Opportunities List for Persons with Disabilities Living on the Navajo Reservation was needed because of the turnover in many of the small businesses. The report was updated in an attempt to provide vocational rehabilitation counselors working with clients on the Navajo Reservation with the most up-to-date information available concerning possible employment opportunities for their clients. In an attempt to better meet the needs of the vocational rehabilitation counselors and their clients, several new fields were added to this version of the Employment Opportunities List, including: the district where the employer is located; the names, addresses, and phone numbers of Chapter Houses within each agency; and the names, addresses, and phone numbers of community services coordinators working for the various Chapter Houses located across the Navajo Nation.

Methods

In order to obtain a complete listing of the Navajo businesses on the Navajo Reservation, different offices of the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the Navajo tribe were contacted. A listing of certified Navajo-owned businesses was obtained from the Division of Economic Development, Navajo Nation (1993, May). Second, Mr. Duane Etsitty, statistical analyst for the Division of Economic Development for the Navajo Nation, provided an Employers Directory (NN/DED, 1992). Also, current yellow pages listings from all reservation-area phonebooks were checked for new employers and for new information about previously listed employers (Navajo Communications Company, 1993; US West Directory, 1993). A listing of Chapter House addresses and phone numbers, Chapter House delegates, and community services coordinators was obtained from Ms. Rena Roan, administrative assistant, Chapter Government Development Department.

In an attempt to supplement the data presented in the Employment Opportunities List, several sources were used to obtain information pertaining to the number of employees employed by individual businesses. Data for 1991 were obtained from Employment and Income 1991 Statistics (TSD/DED, 1991), supplemented by Rodgers (1990), Navajo Economic Development Program, '88 Annual Progress Report; NNOEDP (1987), and Navajo Division of Labor (1987). In general, only the most recent total is shown.

The individual business data from each business listing were cross-referenced with all other business listings to avoid any duplication of listings. In addition, all businesses were cross-referenced and checked with the Standard Industrial Classification Code Manual, to determine correct business classifications (cf. Appendix H). Finally, all businesses were organized into the five Navajo agencies. Navajo agencies include Chinle, Eastern, Fort Defiance, Shiprock, and Western. Once these different listings were acquired and checked, they were organized for input into the computer using a Macintosh IIx, Macintosh SE, utilizing FileMaker Pro 2.0, Microsoft Word 5.1, and a Cricket Graph program. Information entered into the computer for each business listing included: agency, district, SIC code number, employer name, address, city, state and ZIP code, name of owner, type of ownership, city where business is located, state where business is located, phone number, and business type, number of employees for each employer, and whether the business was noted in the 1989 Employment Opportunities List.

Finally, for the convenience of rehabilitation counselors, all of the businesses in this 1993 employer list have been indexed by SIC Code.

Limitations

The business listing is limited to the resources acquired as mentioned in the above introduction. This listing may not include every business on the Navajo Reservation, but through these resources, it is estimated that 90% of all businesses on the Navajo Reservation have been included. This listing is also limited to those businesses that have registered with the Division of Economic Development, including the Business Regulatory Department of the Navajo tribe. Individuals who may have personal businesses, such as jewelry making or ranches, may not be included in this listing.

Results

Results of the accumulation of the different businesses on the Navajo Reservation have been organized by five agencies and Standard Industrial Classification Code (1987). Analysis was based on the total number of businesses on the reservation. The total number of businesses was 1,004. After adding classification codes, the total number was reduced to 991 due to thirteen businesses not identified within SIC code classification. Additionally, after classifying the businesses by agency, the total number was further reduced to 962 due to an additional 29 businesses that did not seem to be located on the Navajo Reservation. For determining percentages, the 962 total was used. Percentages may not total 100% due to rounding of numbers for ease in representation.

The general business listings did not include church representation. Although the 1989 Employment Opportunities List for Persons with Disabilities Living on the Navajo Reservation (Schwartz, 1989) included a list of churches, Alberta Dahoce of the Navajo Nation Employment Office has advised us that it is illegal to keep a list of churches on the Navajo Reservation because it can be used for purposes of discrimination. Therefore, this version of the Employment Opportunities List does not include information about the reservation's churches.

To further analyze the businesses represented within the Navajo Reservation, separate charts have been drawn to show what percentages of each business type are represented within each of the five Navajo agencies (Figures 1-6; for additional statistics see Appendix E). The purpose of this is to help rehabilitation counselors, as well as the Division of Economic Development within the Navajo tribe, to see the percentages of different business representations within each Standard Industrial Classification Code. This breakdown may help further development of specific needed resources within each agency area.

Some statistics were also collected on the number of employees in each organization. When available, this information was included in Appendix A. Although the list is incomplete and unverified, at least 47 employers had more than 150 employees (Table 1). There are a number of these large employers in each agency. Appendix F contains, for each agency, a list of employers who had at least 100 employees.

The largest employers were in the Public Administration Division (Table 1, SIC 9000+): the Navajo Nation Government and the BIA. Educational Services (Table 1, SIC 8200-8299), a subdivision of the Services Division, were the next largest employers. Major utilities (Arizona Public Service Company, T/C/U Division) and mining companies (Peabody Coal Co., BHP-International, Mining Division) were also among the largest employers (Table 1). In fact, there were employers with more than 100 employees in eight of the ten SIC divisions. Only Wholesale and Retail Trade (SIC 5000-5999) are not represented. However, a number of retail enterprises come close (e.g., Basha's Market in Chinle, Appendix A, p. 21, with 92 employees).

The first digit of a SIC code corresponds approximately (but not exactly) to its division; the first two digits together identify a "Major Group" of industries. Among the employers with more than 100 employees, 15 Major Groups are represented. The most numerous Major Group is 82, Educational Services. These include federally funded BIA boarding schools, state schools, and some contract and private schools.

Of the total number of 962 employers on the Navajo Nation, the largest number of employers were in the Services classification, with the second largest representation were in the Trade classification. The employers are listed in Appendix A by Agency and by Standard Industrial Classification Code. A summary of the Standard Industrial Classification Code is given in Appendix G.

Discussion

This update of Schwartz (1989) provides an opportunity to compare the new list with the old and thereby provide VR program managers and counselors with potentially useful information about the structure of employment on the Navajo Reservation. This new listing contains 392 fewer employers than the first listing (Table 2). However, most of this difference is due to the fact that no attempt was made in the current listing to include churches (Service Division, SIC Code 8661), as previously explained. If churches are removed from the comparison, then this update contains 79 fewer employers, a decrease of less than 8%.

This decrease is probably due to a number of factors. One may be that some employers in the 1989 list who have off-reservation business sites have been excluded from Appendix A but retained in Appendix B or C. This exclusion was based on the principle that including employers in border towns, while useful, would greatly increase the length of this listing. Also, despite our attempts to obtain current information for all employers, we made the assumption that if a 1989 employer could not be contacted, they were no longer in business. However, we were not able to make field checks of business changes. Therefore, although the employers who could not be verified have been dropped from the new listing (Appendix A), they are listed in Appendix C with the 1989 information, much of which may be obsolete. Many of these employers may be bona fide.

Another possible factor is that for this update, unlike the original survey, no attempt was made to do a field search for new employers. New employers were added to the list only if they reported to the sources we contacted, as described in the Methodology section.

The decrease of 79 employers was not noticeable in the Trade division (Table 3), where 33 fewer employers appear in this update, a decrease of more than 11%. There was also a noticeable decrease in employers in Mining: 15 fewer employers, a decrease of about 34% (Table 3). The reason for these changes is unknown. The decrease in employers in Mining seems to be part of a trend since 1986; the decrease in employers involved in Trade, however, does not seem to be part of a clear trend (Shook & Schacht, 1993).

The decrease of 79 employers was most noticeable in the Western Navajo Agency, with 47 fewer employers, a 20.8% decrease (Table 4). The reason for this decrease is unknown. The breakdown of the change in employers by industry for each agency is given in Appendix E.

The data from a comparison of the 1989 and the current (1993) listing can also be used to estimate a number of useful statistics (Table 5). For example, the stability rate can be defined as the number of employers who remain in operation throughout the period (1989–1993), divided by the number of employers at the beginning of the period (Price, 1977, p.17). By this measure, public administration agencies are the most stable, because after four years, 90% of them were still in operation. In contrast, only about half (50%) of the 1989 Agriculture and Manufacturing enterprises were still in business in 1993 (Table 5).

The most widely used measure of turnover in the literature is the crude separation rate, which resembles the crude death rate in demography. It can be defined as the number of employers who go out of business during the period, divided by the average number of employers during the period (Price, 1977, pp. 15, 45), divided by the length of the period in years. The highest annual turnover rates are of course in Agriculture and Manufacturing, the least stable industries, and the lowest turnover rate, similarly, is in Public Administration (Table 5). Overall, the annual turnover rate is about 3.4%. This shows how rapidly a business listing such as this can become dated.

One useful property of the turnover rate is that its reciprocal provides an estimate of the average life expectancy of organizations in each industry. Thus the average life expectancy of Agricultural and Manufacturing industries is 13–14 years, whereas for Public Administration, the average is 74 years (Table 5). Counselors may want to consider an employer's stability and life expectancy when advising clients about career development opportunities.

APPENDIX G

The Standard Industrial Classification Of Establishment

The descriptions of each classification by division follows, as directly quoted in the Standard Industrial Classification Manual (1987).

The Standard Industrial Classification of Establishment

The Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) was developed for use in the classification of establishments by type of activity in which they are engaged; for the purposes of facilitating the collection, tabulation, presentation, and analysis of data relating to establishments; and for promoting uniformity and comparability in the presentation of statistical data collected by various agencies of the U.S. Government, state agencies, trade associations, and private research organizations.

The Standard Industrial Classification is intended to cover the entire field of economic activities: agriculture, forestry, fishing, hunting, and trapping; mining; construction; manufacturing; transportation, communications, electric, gas, and sanitary services; wholesale trade; retail trade; finance, insurance, and real estate; personal, business, professional, repair, recreation, and other services; and public administration (Executive Office of the President, Office of Management and Budget, 1987, p. 11).

Structure of the Classification

The structure of the classification makes it possible to tabulate, analyze, and publish establishment data on a division, a two-digit major group, a three-digit industry group, or a four-digit industry code basis, according to the level of industrial detail considered most appropriate. An agency may use additional subdivisions within specific four-digit industries in adoption this classification for its own use, while still retaining comparability with the classifications used by other agencies.

It should be noted that the digit "9" appearing in the third- or fourth-digit position of the classification code usually designates miscellaneous three-digit industry groups or four-digit industries covering establishments not elsewhere classified (nec). These residual classifications do not usually constitute homogeneous primary activity groups; for purposes of this classification system, they are grouped together and treated as a separate industry to retain the homogeneity of the other industries in the group ((Executive Office of the President, Office of Management and Budget, 1987, p. 12).

Basis of Code Assignment in the SIC

Operating Establishments. Each operating establishment is assigned an industry code on the basis of its primary activity, which is determined by its principal product or group of products produced or distributed, or services rendered. Ideally, the principal product or service should be determined by its relative share of value added at the establishment. In practice, however, it is rarely possible to obtain this measure for individual products or services; typically, it is necessary to adopt some other criterion, which may be expected to give approximately the same results in determining the primary activity of an establishment (Executive Office of the President, Office of Management and Budget, 1987, p. 15).

Division A

Agriculture, Forestry, and Fishing. This division includes establishments primarily engaged in agricultural production, forestry, commercial fishing, hunting and trapping, and related services.

The classification of agricultural production covers establishments (e.g.., farms, ranches, dairies, greenhouses, nurseries, orchards, hatcheries) primarily engaged in the keeping, grazing, or feeding of livestock for the sale of livestock or livestock products (including serums), for livestock increase, or for value increase. Livestock as used here includes cattle, sheep, goats, hogs, and poultry. Also included are animal specialties, such as horses, rabbits, bees, pets, fur-bearing animals in captivity, and fish in captivity. Agricultural production also includes establishments primarily engaged in the operation of sod farms, cranberry bogs, and poultry hatcheries; in the production of mushrooms, bulbs, flower seeds, and vegetable seeds; and in the growing of hydroponic crops.

Farms are the establishment units generally utilized for the purpose of industrial classification of agricultural production. A farm may consist of a single tract of land, or a number of separate tracts which may be held under different tenures. For example, one tract may be owned by the farm operator and another rented. It may be operated by the operator alone or with the assistance of members of the household or hired employees, or it may be operated by a partnership, corporation, or other type of organization. When a landowner has one or more tenants, renters, croppers, or managers, the land operated by each is considered a farm.

The classification of agricultural services includes establishments primarily engaged in supplying soil-preparation services, crop services, landscape and horticultural services, veterinary and other animal services, and farm-labor management services.

The classification of forestry covers establishments primarily engaged in the operation of timber tracts, tree farms, or forest nurseries; in the gathering of forest products; or in performing forestry services ((Executive Office of the President, Office of Management and Budget, 1987, p. 21).

Division B

Mining. This division includes all establishments primarily engaged in mining. The term mining is used in the broad sense to include the extraction of minerals occurring naturally: solids, such as coal and ores; liquids, such as crude petroleum; and gasses, such as natural gas. The term mining is also used in the broad sense to include quarrying, well operations, milling (e.g., crushing, screening, washing, flotation), and other preparation customarily done at the mine site or as a part of mining activity.

Exploration and development of mineral properties are included. Services performed on a contract of fee basis in the development or operation of mineral properties are classified separately but within this division. Establishments that have complete responsibility for operating mines, quarries, or oil and gas wells for others on a contract or fee basis are classified according to the product mined rather than as mineral services.

Mining operations as classified, by industry, on the basis of the principal mineral produced, or, if there is no production, on the basis of the principal mineral for which exploration or development work is in process. The mining of culm banks, ore dumps, and tailing piles is classified as mining according to the principal mineral product derived (Executive Office of the President, Office of Management and Budget, 1987, p. 39).

Division C

Construction. This division includes establishments primarily engaged in construction. The term construction includes new work, additions, alterations, reconstruction, installations, and repairs. Construction activities are generally administered or managed from a relatively fixed place of business, but the actual construction work is performed at one or more different sites. If a company has more than one relatively fixed place of business form which it undertakes or manages construction activities and for which separate data on the number of employees, payroll, receipts, and other establishment-type records are maintained, each such place of business is considered a separate construction establishment.

Three broad types of construction activity are covered: (a) building construction by general contractors or by operative builders, (b) heavy construction other than building by general contractors and special trade contractors, and (c) construction activity by other special trade contractors. Special trade contractors are primarily engaged in specialized construction activities, such as plumbing, painting, and electrical work, and work for general contractors under subcontract or directly for property owners.

General contractors usually assume responsibility for an entire construction project but may subcontract to others all of the actual construction work or those portions of the project that require special skills or equipment. General contractors thus may or may not have construction workers on their payroll.

Building-construction general contractors are primarily engaged in the construction of dwellings, office buildings, stores, farm buildings, and other building construction projects.

General contractors and special trade contractors for heavy construction other than building are primarily engaged in the construction of highways; pipelines, communications and power lines, and sewer and water mains; and other heavy construction projects. Special trade constrictors are classified in heavy construction other than building if they are primarily engaged in activities such as grading for highway and airport runways; guardrail construction; installation of highway signs; asphalt and concrete construction; underwater rock removal; pipeline wrapping; or land clearing and leveling.

Other special trade contractors undertake activities of a type that are either specialized to building construction or may be undertaken for building or nonbuilding projects. These activities include painting (including bridge painting and traffic-lane painting) and electrical work (including work on bridges, power lines, and power plants) (Executive Office of the President, Office of Management and Budget, 1987, pp. 53-54).

Division D

Manufacturing. The manufacturing division includes establishments engaged in the mechanical or chemical transformation of materials or substances into new products. These establishments are usually described as plants, factories, or mills and characteristically use power-driven machines and materials-handling equipment. Establishments engaged in assembling component parts of manufactured products are also considered "manufacturing"if the new product is neither a structure nor other fixed improvement. Also included is the blending of materials, such as lubricating oils, plastics, resins, or liquors.

The materials processed by manufacturing establishments include products of agriculture, forestry, fishing, mining, and quarrying as well as products of other manufacturing establishments. The new product of a manufacturing establishment may be finished in the sense that it is ready for utilization or consumption, or it may be semifinished to become a raw material for an establishment engaged in further manufacturing. For example, the product of the copper smelter is the raw material used in electrolytic refineries; refined copper is the raw material used by copper wire mills; and copper wire is the raw material used by certain electrical equipment manufacturers. The materials used by manufacturing establishments may be purchased directly from producers, obtained through customary trade channels, or secured without recourse to the market by transferring the product from one establishment to another that is under the same ownership. Manufacturing production is usually carried on for the wholesale market, for interplant transfer, or to order for industrial users, rather than for direct sale to the domestic consumer (Executive Office of the President, Office of Management and Budget, 1987, p. 67).

Division E

Transportation, Communications, Electric, Gas, and Sanitary Services. This division includes establishments providing, to the general public or to other business enterprises: passenger and freight transportation; communications services; electricity, gas, steam, water, or sanitary services; and all establishments of the U.S. Postal Service.

For many of the industries in this division, the establishments have activities, workers, and physical facilities distributed over an extensive geographic area. For this division, the establishment is represented by a relatively permanent office, shop, station, terminal, or warehouse, etc., that is either (a) directly responsible for supervising such activities or (b) the base from which personnel operate to carry out these activities.

The establishments classified in this division furnish services to the general public or to other business enterprises; establishments that furnish similar services only to other establishments of the same enterprise are classified as auxiliary to the establishments or units of the enterprise that they serve. However, separate establishments primarily engaged in long-distance trucking, stevedoring, water transportation, to pipeline transportation are classified according to their activity and not as auxiliaries, even though they serve only establishments of the same enterprise (Executive Office of the President, Office of Management and Budget, 1987, p. 265).

Division F

Wholesale Trade. This division includes establishments or places of business primarily engaged in selling merchandise to retailers; to industrial, commercial, institutional, farm, construction contractors, or professional business users; or to other wholesalers; or to those acting as agents or brokers in buying merchandise for or selling merchandise to such persons or companies.

The chief functions of establishments included in wholesale trade are selling goods to trading establishments or to industrial, commercial, institutional, farm, construction, contractors, or professional business users; and bringing buyer and seller together. In addition to selling, functions frequently performed by wholesale establishments include maintaining inventories of goods; extending credit; physical assembling; sorting, and grading goods in large lots; breaking bulk and redistribution in smaller lots; delivery; refrigeration; and various types of promotion such as advertising and label designing.

The principal types of establishments included are: (a) merchant-wholesalers who take title to the goods they sell, such as wholesale merchants or jobbers, industrial distributors, voluntary group wholesalers, exporters, importers, cash-and-carry wholesalers, drop shippers, truck distributors, retailer cooperative warehouses, terminal elevators, cooperative buying associations, and assemblers, branches and sales office (but not retail stores) maintained by manufacturing, refining, or mining enterprises apart form their plants or mines for the purpose of marketing their products; and (b) agents, merchandise or commodity brokers, and commission merchants (Executive Office of the President, Office of Management and Budget, 1987, p. 287).

Division G

Retail Trade. This division includes establishments engaged in selling merchandise for personal or household consumption and rendering services incidental to the sale of the goods. In general, retail establishments are classified by kind of business according to the principal lines of commodities sold (groceries, hardware, etc.) or the usual trade designation (drugstore, cigar store, etc.). Some of the important characteristics of retail trade establishments are: (a) the establishment is usually a place of business and is engaged in activities to attract the general public to buy; (b) the establishment buys or receives merchandise as well as sells; (c) the establishment may process its products, but such processing is incidental or subordinate to selling; (d) the establishment is considered as retail in the trade; and (e) the establishment sells to customers for personal or household use. Not all of these characteristics need be present and some are modified by trade practice.

For the most part, establishments engaged in retail trade sell merchandise to the general public for personal or household consumption (Executive Office of the President, Office of Management and Budget, 1987, p. 313).

Division H

Finance, Insurance, and Real Estate. This division includes establishments operating primarily in the fields of finance, insurance, and real estate. Finance includes depository institutions, nondepository credit institutions, holding (but not predominately operating) companies, other investment companies, brokers and dealers in securities and commodity contracts, and security and commodity exchanges. Insurance covers carriers of all types of insurance, and insurance agents and brokers. Real estate includes owners, lessors, lessees, buyers, sellers, agents, and developers of real estate (p. 355).

Division I

Services. This division includes establishments primarily engaged in providing a wide variety of services for individuals, business and government establishments, and other organizations. Hotels and other lodging places; establishments providing personal, repair, and amusement services; health, legal, engineering, and other professional services; educational institutions; membership organizations; and other miscellaneous services are included (Executive Office of the President, Office of Management and Budget, 1987, p. 353).

Division J

Public Administration. This division includes the executive, legislative, judicial, administrative and regulatory activities of federal, state, local, and international governments. Government-owned-and-operated business establishments are classified in major groups 01-89 according to the activity in which they are engaged. Private establishments primarily engaged in the same activities as government establishments in public administration are classified in major groups 01-89 according to the activity in which they are engaged (Executive Office of the President, Office of Management and Budget, 1987, p. 407).
